Mastro: the man behind the 'Wall of Voo Doo'

By MARIELLA ROTONDI
Entertainment Editor

John Mastro's desk in the ASB quarters, was cluttered with stacks of tickets for "Wall of Voodoo" concert to be held in Monarch Hall at 8 p.m. this Saturday.

As commissioner of social activities, Mastro is the man behind the scene entrusted with the responsibility of bringing quality entertainment to LAVC students.

"Usually when I get an idea for a band," said Mastro, "I try to figure out who is popular and who is going to sell out."

The procedure of securing a band involves calling record companies and agencies to find out which groups are available. For the most part, it takes three or four bands before Mastro finds one that is available. He then has to coordinate the date with other activities being held in Monarch Hall.

One of Mastro's chief responsibilities is to stay within the budget allocated by the ASB. Mastro's budget for the year is $2,000. He hopes the money from future shows will be directed back into his account in order to keep it operating.

"If the show grosses $4,000, and it doesn't go in my account, it's hard to continue the program," explained Mastro, "and as far as transferring funds from other accounts, it takes a lot of time."

When the price has been established for the band or show, the next step is to inform the manager or agent. They in turn will let Mastro know if the deal is on or

Jones active in ERA, CISPES, evening safety

By ELEANOR McKEEVER
Feature Editor

Whether opposing U.S. intervention in El Salvador, passionately advocating the ratification of the ERA, or dyeing her hair pink in a campus restroom, Kimberly Jones, Associated Student Body commissioner of evening division, makes her presence felt at Valley College.

Jones, a 22-year-old history major from Tennessee, thinks she is probably better known as an active member of CISPES (Committee in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador) than as the evening division commissioner serving her second semester in office.

"I think I have a lot of contact with the students," said Jones, "but I think that comes mostly from working with CISPES. People feel really alienated from working with the student government," said Jones. "A lot of people don't realize that the student council here makes a lot of decisions that students either don't think or don't realize they can alter."

Jones recently decided to allocate a large portion of ASB's $600 yearly evening division budget to what she deemed a worthy cause.

"What I did," Jones explained, "was give $400 to purchase jackets and flashlights for the Nightwatch Program of the Valley College Administration of Justice Club."

Another $150 from the budget made it possible for Jones to present a film for evening students last Thurs-

CISPES rally targets on U.S. foreign policy, draft issue

By MARIS BELLAMY
Staff Writer

A rally against the war in El Salvador was held Wednesday, March 17, with guest speakers commenting on the draft, foreign policy and the popular struggle.

Sponsored by the Committee in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador (CISPES), the rally drew a crowd of about 150 students.

"The Salvadoran people are subjected to subhuman conditions," said Arnalbo Ramos, president of the Farabundo Marti Front for National Liberation (FMLN). "They have to take up arms to prepare for the structural changes made on them by the government."

Destruction

According to Ramos the war is now entering the cities. Because the majority of the population lives in the countryside, the opposition is destroying the country in order to eliminate the rebel forces.

He notes that 36,000 people have been killed in the last two years and that the war has taken on military and political dimension. "Government forces are beginning to collapse. 15 and 16 year olds are being recruited and given six-week training, when training should take two years," said Ramos. "Armed forces have reached their limit."

Fidel Castro, President of the Councils of State and Ministers of Cuba, did not get involved in El Salvador until the revolution started.

"American War"

"It is up to the people of the United States to try and change foreign policies if they want to avoid a Latin American war. If not, it will involve Cuba," stressed Ramos. He added that interventionary machinery is already rolling in Nicaragua.

"We are fighting to promote the principle of self-determination and trying to get a response for the majority of the people. Weapons may be exported to our country, but not the will of the people," said Ramos.

"Everyone should seek the truth, seek information, and do something about it. This is no longer an El Salvador war, but an American war. If this happens, it will be catastrophic. It will be 100 times worse than Vietnam," concluded Ramos.

Blase Bonpane spoke on the credibility of information given on El Salvador by the State Department.

"Hot bed of liars"

"In the Bay of Pigs, the United States, denied complicity, but it wasn't true. Information gained from the State Department is not credible. The department is a hot bed of liars," remarked Bonpane.

He added that the government supported the Nazis in Chili, the dictatorship in Nicaragua, and the military in El Salvador. The United States became an enemy of democracy in the hemisphere.

Bonpane noted that nobody should enter into the mythology of the media and a judgement has to be made between the criminal and victim. "We shouldn't give in to the myth that we are powerless, we are making history," he said.

"Though the people in the United States have no access to decisions made on the draft and foreign policy, changes can be made by mass mobilization. Teach-ins and sit-ins can be used to get the message heard," said Bonpane.

"Violent change is caused by those who are in power," he said. "Revolutionary politics is used to protect the family in El Salvador against the United States."

According to Bonpane, the purpose of the revolution is to bring good news to the poor, to provide decent housing, and to live as human beings.

Bonpane indicates that 89 percent of Americans are opposed to intervention in El Salvador, but since the President is a salesperson for the arms industry, business goes on as usual.

Monroe Doctrine

"We are going to change the world," claims Farrell Broslawsky, professor of history, "you came here to get involved in a movement."

"In the Monroe Doctrine," he said, "it states that Central America is ours, so anyone who messes with it is attacking the United States," added Broslawsky.

"Latin America is summarized in two words," said Broslawsky. "One half says 'bomb it' and the other half says 'buy it.'"

In the 1880's the United States went to the Caribbean and freed Cuba from the Cubans, then wrote into the Constitution that the U.S. can interfere whenever it wants to, Broslawsky notes.

"We won't destroy people on the behalf of American business, if the oil companies want to go fine, but we won't go," stressed Broslawsky.

Parallel

John McIver, Vietnam veteran, spoke on his experience in Vietnam, and the similarities and differences between Vietnam and El Salvador.

"When I volunteer for service in Vietnam, I believed everything that I was told. I was in there a week before I realized everything they were telling me wasn't true, said McIver. "I talked to my father who was in World War 2 and we couldn't even compare war stories. The situations were so different."

McIver said that even though he didn't want to make friends during the war, the troops became like brothers to him. Later on they would be shot down right in front of him.

McIver was hit three times in Vietnam. "I lost a leg, had to have 18 months of reconstructive surgery on my face, lost half of my stomach, and I cannot use my left hand because of a severed nerve in my arm caused by flying shrapnel," he said.

"The guys who came back from the war are worse off than us, because they have to think about it for the rest of their life," said McIver. "As bad as Vietnam was, this war in El Salvador will probably be even worse."

Abortion bills sinful

In the course of the past year, three proposals have been introduced to the U.S. Senate in hopes of establishing strict anti-abortion legislation, both on a federal and state level.

Unusual as it may be for related legislation to be presented concurrently, there has been a consistent push by a religious conservative coalition in the Senate to enact tough anti-abortion laws.

In July 1981, the "human life" bill, S 158, was approved by the Senate Separation of Powers Subcommittee. Introduced by Sen. John East, R-NC, the proposal declares that human life begins at conception and would allow not only Congress, but the states the power to pass anti-abortion legislation.

East's colleague, conservative Republican Sen. Jesse Helms, introduced S 1741, an identical states rights resolution to S 158 in October of the same year.

Realizing the slim possibilities of passing legislation totally prohibiting legal abortion, Sen. Ornin Hatch, Republican Conservative activist from Utah, threw his considerable political weight behind Helms' bill (S 1741).

Taking a step in an obvious direction, Hatch introduced a proposal that was essentially no different than the previous two: elementary, single-sided, and self-righteous.

Hatch's bill, SJ Res 110, would give both Congress and the states joint authority to restrict abortion and would declare that no right to an anti-septic abortion is secured by Constitutional law. The more restrictive law, either state or federal, would prevail. Currently, both S 1741 and SJ 110 are waiting to be scheduled for Senate debate.

By applying a simplistic inverse analogy between the rate of teenage pregnancies of this resolution and similar moralistic legislation have again shown a profound ignorance to the actual reasons that lead to the choice of pregnancy alternatives, such as contraceptives and abortion.

In a recent attempt to scrutinize the sale of prescription contraceptives to female minors, the federal government has ignored the cause of the problem and instead, proposed legislation that would radically alter the current solutions to this increasingly pressing question.

In the process, they have insultingly suggested female inferiority in regard to maintenance of their own bodies, contradicted and ignored scores of testimony by prominent physicians regarding relative determinants of human life, and has again tried to alleviate the public of the "sinful" temptation of freedom of choice.

SICK AND TIRED OF IT

Healthy men, where?

By ELEANOR McKEEVER
Feature Editor

I wish somebody could tell me why men are always getting sick, why the stronger sex isn't that strong at all?

Perhaps I tend to exaggerate, but it seems to me that every

Last weekend alone, my soccer-playing, weight-training brother was stricken with indigestion and took to his bed for two days, while some 10 or 12 miles away my poor boyfriend lay in another bed courageously battling a sore throat. Neither one, it seemed, was fit to fulfill

I've known too many men with perpetual colds who sniffle at the first sign of a cool breeze and give their doctors writer's cramp with never-ending prescription requests. I don't know why it is, but it seems that our mighty machos can't handle being sick at all.

When a woman is sick, it is, of course, "all in the mind!" But, lo and behold, when a man is sick — that's a pretty serious business. One wonders how the world goes on without them as they scurry to their beds with a mass dose of self-pity; or worse yet, when they prop themselves up on the living room couch and verbalize repetitious updates on their respective conditions that nobody asked for in the first place. Who ever said misery doesn't love company?

The point of the matter is that men just don't seem to wear that well. It's really quite sad to think that nobody expects them to outlive their small, delicate, and weaker mates.

When I was younger I used to think that God really should have given the tremendous task of childbearing to the much acclaimed stronger sex. Now I realize what a ridiculous fancy that was.

man I have had the fortune or misfortune to know lives his life in a rather precarious state of health.

Ask a man how he's feeling, and you'll see what I mean. How often do you hear one reply "great," "fantastic," "couldn't be better." Even a little "fine, thanks" is pitifully hard to extract.

his breadwinning duty.

Somehow the tales of a sick man always remind me of that story about the boy who cried "Wolf!" How is one ever to know when a man is really ill if he claims he is every other day?

I'm afraid that knowing too many hypochondriacs has left me a little short on sympathy when it comes to ailing males.

STOP DRAFT RESISTANCE

Patriotism hits all time low

By DAVID TULANIAN
Staff Writer

Patriotism toward America is unbelievably low. It has made me come to the following conclusions:

1. That my professors of the political Left are more successful at converting my peers to their viewpoint than are my conservative teachers.

2. That it plain isn't fashionable these days for sophisticated students to admit publicly how much they love America and would be willing to serve their country in time of national emergency.

I suspect that soon we shall see a "Committee to Resist Draft Registration," formed for the "minorities" on campus who in this case happen to be able-bodied young men who are breaking the law by not signing up for peacetime registration.

The committee will be the brain-child of the "well-meaning" people, that is, one or two professors who are running around like Chicken Little, proclaiming "the sky is falling in," because of President Ronald Reagan's revitalization of the Selective Service. These so-called teachers of higher learning will be doing their good deeds all in the name of the students of Valley College who are dedicated to the "concepts of peace."

What a laugh! While there may be young men who are truly opposed to war because of religious or moral grounds, and who perhaps should be excused from service, they are few in number. The bottom line is that the young men who failed to register are taking their freedom for granted.

"ensures that the man who obeys the law will be called in his place."

Currently, some 6.6 million young men have honored their obligation of citizenship. How must they feel to now watch the brouhaha of liberal cries in defense of the 800,000 "poor, young men" who have not?

Remember, a young man can apply for conscientious objector status, (CO) but "only if he is registered."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

El Salvador

Editor,

Well it appears that CISPES is at it again. They staged "Guerilla Theatre" to express their ideas through shock treatment to the Valley College student body. They continue to point their accusing fingers at the government of El Salvador justify the bloody deeds they are committing. Their cause has become control of El Salvador as a whole, by their rules, nobody else.

The boycott of the elections may be a clever ploy on the guerillas' part. When the people of El Salvador pick a new leader that is not from their group, they will scream that the elections were not fair and are invalid as the cause of such ruthless violence in that country.

"... the rebels have attacked government outposts of tens of soldiers with hundreds of rebels, slaughtering and maiming as they took control ..."

In all the finger pointing the CISPES group has done at the current government in El Salvador, it appears that they have failed to note that the guerillas are committing atrocities on the Salvadorian population as well. These rebel groups have swept into small towns of the rural areas of El Salvador, leveling machine guns at the townspeople and informing them that they were taking command. The rebels have attacked government outposts of tens of soldiers with hundreds of rebels, slaughtering and maiming as they took control.

The upcoming elections in El Salvador, scheduled for March 28, are being boycotted by the leftist movement. The land reform program that has established around 200 farm-worker cooperatives in El Salvador, according to the AFL-CIO who is helping in its organization, appears to have been totally ignored by the rebels as a compromising move. The nationalization of banks, removing them from private ownership, has also been ignored by the left. What is it then that the guerillas want? Power. Control. They are no longer interested in the cause for the people, it is used only as a claim to because the elections were rigged. They have and will claim it as the reason why they did not participate. In this argument they will be able to destroy the credibility of the new leader and continue their acts of terrorism.

If the leftist candidates did participate, what did they have to lose? The claim that they are the people's movement, and surely they could not afford that.

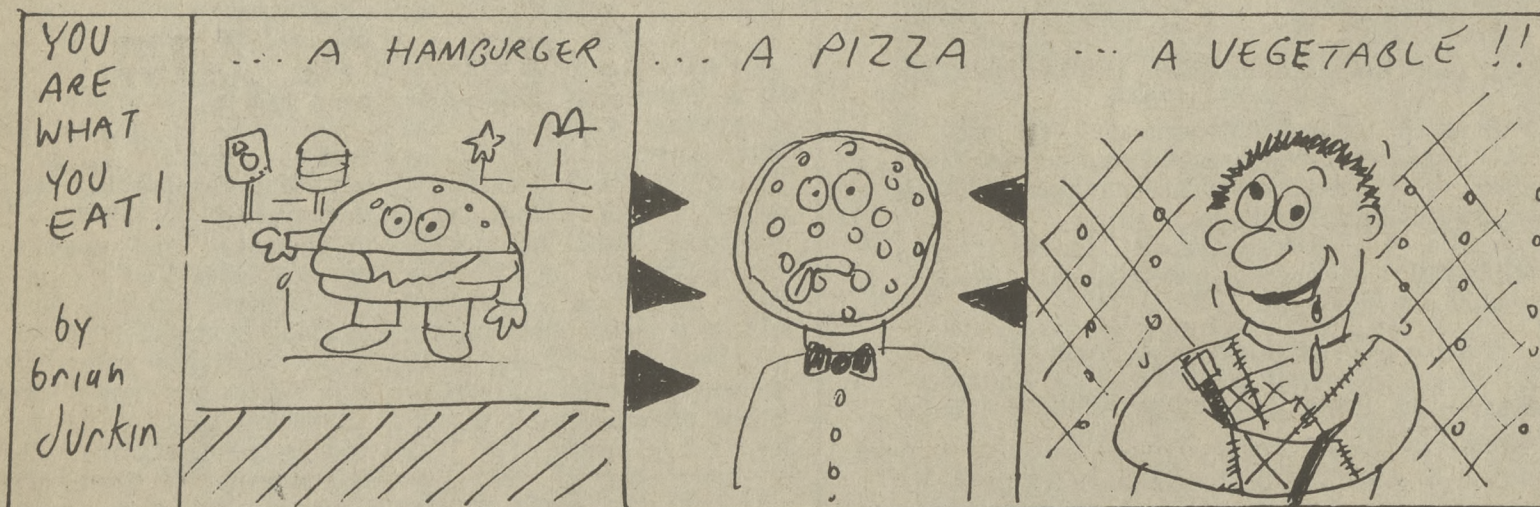

A final but interesting note on these elections is the conflict which an individual faces when he wants to vote for the non-leftist leader, that by simply voting, any guerilla can tell whose side he's on and may target him as his next victim. This may not be as critical in the cities as it is in the rural areas, where the greatest concentrations of guerillas are found.

Engineering Major

day night in Monarch Hall. The film, called "The People Will Win," concerned what Jones called "people struggling against oppression" and was Jones' first film presentation.

"I want to get more films and speakers for evening students," said Jones. "Another thing I really want to do," she said, "is keep the library open late, until about 10:30 p.m. If I can get people to work that late, I'll ask council for more money."

However, Jones' main priority at present, she said, is security on campus.

"Some people come to class at night, some come here to see a movie, and some come to use the library, but security is the big concern of all students," said Jones.

The campus at night is, according to Jones, "relatively safe." She recalled an incident last semester when she was dyeing her hair in one of the restrooms. Somebody called the police, she said, and they arrived on the scene immediately. She hopes campus police will act with due diligence in a "real" emergency. Jones acknowledged, however, that they are "pretty supportive."

Aside from some reading and movie-going, Jones said she devotes what spare time she has to CISPES. A member of CISPES since the committee was formed in Fall 1980, Jones said, "Response to us on campus was lukewarm in the beginning, but this semester the support has been overwhelming. We've had quite a few teachers support us."

Jones, who plans to transfer to UCLA, hopes, in the future, to teach history at college level. El Salvador and the ERA will probably be history by then, she surmised.

"People often just wander into my office and sit down and talk. I get to meet a lot of interesting people."

"It terrifies me to think that the ERA might not pass," said Jones, a member of the Campus Alliance for the ERA.

"The ERA should be like a natural right. It should not even need an amendment for men and women to be treated equally," said Jones. She is concerned about the "distorted" image people have of the ERA.

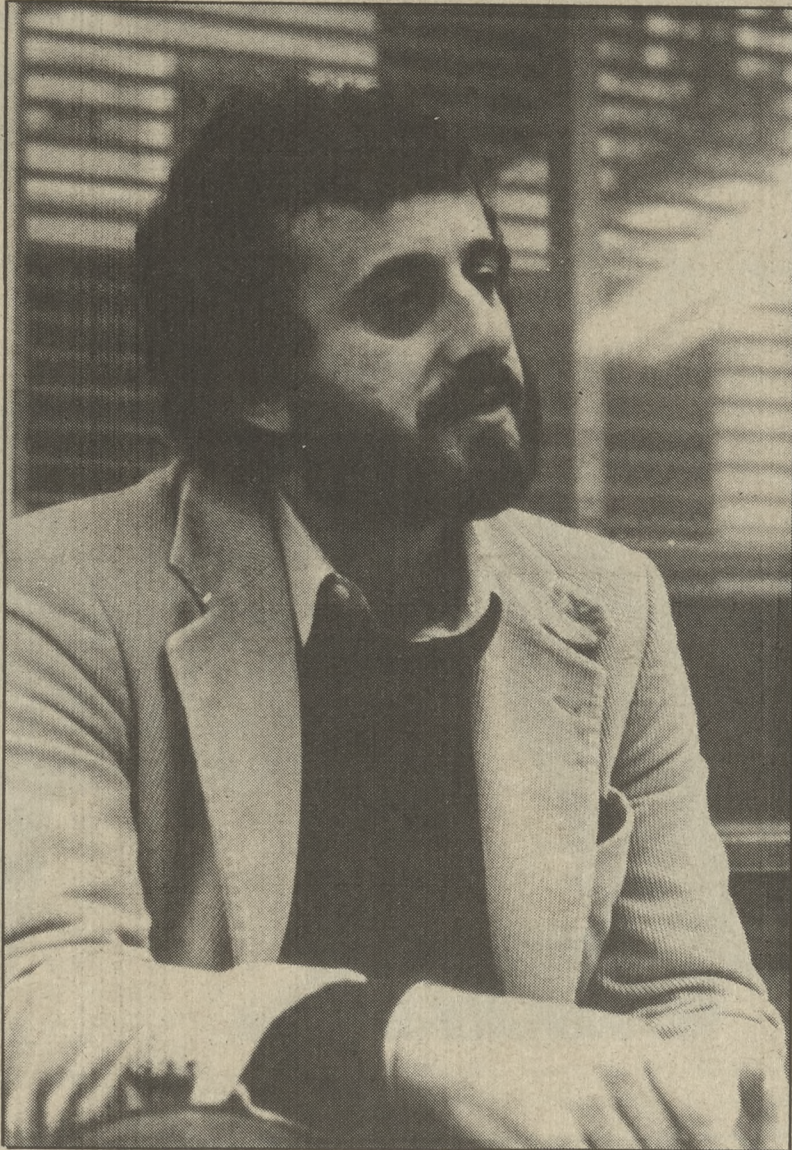

"Equality of rights under the law should not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of sex," said Jones, quoting Section 1 of the amendment. "It doesn't say anything about communal bathrooms," she added.

Some women, Jones pointed out, are cautious of the ERA because they think they can be drafted if it is passed.

"What they don't know," she stressed, "is that they can be drafted right now."

Jones, who has been at Valley for almost two years, sees herself in the future as being "active." There are many people whom she admires, particularly, New York Congresswoman Bella Abzug, and Dorothy Healy, founder of NAM (New American Movement).

Closer to home, she has great admiration for the faculty at Valley. "I've had wonderful teachers here who've opened up my eyes in so many ways," she said.

Although her days may be filled with classes, studying, and the commitments of political affiliation, office hours are just beginning at five o'clock for commissioner of evening division.

"People often just wander into my office and sit down and talk," said Jones. "I get to meet a lot of interesting people."

One of the less pleasant aspects about being an ASB commissioner, Jones pointed out, is that she and other Executive Council members sometimes "butt heads" over how money is to be spent. She would like to see more money go to the library and the learning center in place of that spent on Homecoming, student government conventions, and banquets.

"Our recent Executive Council Banquet was an absurd expense," she said. "They gave out plaques, and everybody just sat around patting each other on the back."

"But I really like being commissioner of evening division," said Jones. "I'm thinking of running for this office again next semester."

not. However, the process can get complicated.

Once a deal has been consummated with a particular show, the work begins.

"To finalize the show, I have to deal with different levels of administration in the school. In my capacity I don't have the authority for the final decision. The final say so always comes from the President, Dr. Lee," he said.

After Mastro talks to agents, confirms the date, he then has to convince the people above him that the show should be brought to the Valley.

The approval of the contract usually takes a week. By this time Mastro has done most of the advertising.

"I try to do as glamorous a show as I can," he said. "The upcoming show 'Wall of Voodoo,' is one of the most popular bands in the Los Angeles area, and a sell out everywhere they play."

Mastro, a native New Yorker, is planning on continuing through one more semester at Valley and then hopes to transfer to NYU or UCLA in Spring '83.

22nd annual competition

One-act festival opens

By MIKE BRAILER
Staff Writer

Every year, at about this time as The Los Angeles International Film Exposition (better known as Filmex) gathers actors from all over the world in a flurry of pomp and hoopla, the Theater Arts department here at LAVC quietly holds a little get-together of its own and lets the public in free.

It's called the 22nd Annual High School One-Act Festival, and from March 29 to April 2, in Valley's Little Theater, actors from 28 high schools throughout Southern California will perform in competition, judged by some of the harshest critics in the business - working actors.

The list of judges from years past reads like a "Who's Who," according to Patrick Riley, Theater Arts department chairman and one of the festival's organizers. Such talents as Ed Asner, Lucie Arnaz, Lee J. Cobb, and George Kennedy have been volunteer judges, as have former Valley students such as Victor French (who played the sheriff in the short-lived ABC-TV series, "Carter Country") and Christopher Norris (from CBS-TV's "Trapper John, MD").

A partial list of judges for this year's festival include former Valley students Lee de Broux (featured in the movie, "Norma Rae") and Brendan Burns (who worked with Robert DeNiro and Jack Nicholson in "The Last Tycoon").

Dr. Kim Brokar, a new addition to the theater arts faculty, will also be judging.

During the first four days of competition, from noon to 7 p.m. each high school will have exactly one hour to set up and perform a one-act play. Four plays, one from each day's competition will be selected by the judges to return for the finals, which begin at 6 p.m. the following Friday. Admission will be free for the preliminary competition, and $3 for the finals (proceeds go to the Valley Collegiate Players, the campus drama club).

High schools are free to perform any play they choose, and a list of plays provided by Riley showed some ambitious choices. Some well-known titles on the schedule are: "A Streetcar Named Desire," from Chatsworth High; "The Elephant Man," from Hollywood High; "Nuts," (which is still playing at the L.A. Stage Co. in Hollywood) from Ocean View High; and two productions of "Hair," by Palisades and North Hollywood high schools.

In addition to the chance of winning one of the many awards given during the festival, the students will have a chance to get acquainted with the LAVC campus, said Riley. Students from our Theater Arts department volunteer each year to tour participants around the campus and answer questions about Valley and its Theater Arts program.

"The students enjoy the college atmosphere," said Barbara Shields, drama teacher at North Hollywood High.

Debra Grieb, drama teacher at Taft High, and festival winner for the past two years said the event's "very beneficial to the students."

Handicaps are not disabling for sports-minded students

By JANINE PACKER
Staff Writer

Physical Education is becoming a reality to the handicapped at Valley College. Students are going to find it extremely difficult to receive a waiver from P.E., said Jim Gayton, Physical Education Instructor at Valley.

Gayton works in the Special Services Program to develop a physical education program for the handicapped, and temporarily disabled persons. Gayton, who has many degrees, is specialized in areas of exercise physiology, athletic training and is credentialed in working with handicapped persons, all of which qualify him as a valuable asset to George Kopoulos' Special Services Program. "Kopoulos realized the importance of physical education for the handicapped and asked me to help him actualize a way to get the handicapped physically active," said Gayton.

Gayton who in '79 was paralyzed from the waist down due to a fall he experienced helping a ski student in the snow, personally knows what it's like to be handicapped. "I was paralyzed for two months and fought like crazy to get back and I'm still fighting it. It's a challenge." Gayton overcame his condition through surgery, extreme conditioning and therapy. One year later he competed in the Iron Man Triathlon in Hawaii.

"Before my accident I was offered many good jobs working with special education but I always turned them down because I enjoyed teaching P.E.

so much," said Gayton. "However after the accident it seemed as though someone was trying to tell me something. The writing was on the wall, and I accepted this position."

Gayton teaches an adaptive swimming class, wheelchair basketball, weight-training, and general exercise classes. According to Gayton these classes are open to disabled and non-disabled students. Gayton encourages students who are temporarily disabled to enroll in his classes to stay fit while healing. "It's really gratifying to see people realize that a person with a disability is really no different," said Gayton.

"The sole objective and purpose is to mainstream the disabled into society," said Gayton adding that he would like to see more disabled students work themselves into normal P.E. classes. Gayton said he had one student who worked his way into a normal P.E. class and now won't take a special P.E. class. Gayton feels that students who utilize his classes to maximize their physical abilities will improve their self esteem and give them confidence to compete in society.

Aside from teaching, doing his own intense workout exercise program, raising a family of seven children, working an off campus job, and presiding over the North Hollywood Bicycle club, Gayton is also involved in the inter-relational activities of his students.

He is active in planning the first annual Valley College Special Olympics for 16-year-olds and older to be held May 1. Gayton is involved in planning and supervising field trips for disabled and non-disabled students together.

Gayton makes personal efforts to arrange transportation for his students such as picking up one of his students and bringing her to school so she can demonstrate to state auditors her skill of typing with her nose. Gayton said, "It is unfortunate that the educational process is controlled by just getting to school."

Gayton describes this student as an outstanding example of someone always smiling and laughing making others around her enthusiastic. "She's one of those people that authorities said couldn't learn anything. It's such a direct contradiction. It's so important that she be here so people at the state level can see how valuable our program is."

Workshop on cheerleading

The last of three LAVC cheerleading and yell-leading workshops will be held Tuesday March 30, in the women's gym.

"These workshops were designed to teach everything that potential cheerleaders will need to know for the April 1 try-outs," says Joanne Waddell, associate professor of physical education and advisor to the cheerleaders.

Waddell has not specified how many people will be chosen for the squad, however, a mascot will also be picked from the tryouts.

The workshops are open to all men and women who may be interested in trying out. Waddell says anyone interested in further information may call her at 781-1200, extension 279.

Antonin Hodek

Valley's renowned mime to perform in W. Germany

By BILL LUBIN
Staff Writer

It's not too early to begin making plans for next summer.

Antonin Hodek, mime and instructor in Theater Arts at LAVC for the last ten years, has already made his plans. He will be performing throughout West Germany during this summer. Hodek is a mime with international credentials.

"One of my former students has the only mime theater in the world," said Hodek, "and it is sponsored by the city of Cologne." Hundreds of festivals and fairs are presented throughout Europe during the summer and "I was invited to perform first at the Cologne festival."

Hodek was born and raised in Prague, Czechoslovakia. He came to the United States in 1968 as part of a troupe of performers known as the "Magic Lantern," that came to perform at a fair in San Antonio, Texas. While here, the Russians invaded Czechoslovakia, and Hodek decided to remain in this country.

Hodek is not only a noted mime, but has just received excellent reviews on one of his plays, "Happy Birthday, Freddy" which just finished a run in a Los Angeles Theater.

Not surprisingly, Hodek said, "Emmet Kelly, and Charles Chaplin are my heroes."

Success of Valley's blind DJ paves the way for another

By RITA SAKAJIAN
Staff Writer

Thanks to John Cowles, the blind disc jockey who has his own radio show on KVCN, (our own campus radio station), another blind student has been encouraged to try his hand in radio broadcasting.

He is 27-year-old Jeree Latimore, who recently transferred to LAVC from Mission College in San Fernando.

While Latimore was attending

Mission College, he heard through a friend about Cowles, and the work he was doing at the LAVC radio station.

"At Mission all I could study was communications, so when I heard about John, I decided to register at LAVC," Latimore said.

Cowles has been working to make improvements in the control booth in order to make it more accessible for the blind. He has thus far Brailled the needed records and also the control board.

"John has enlightened and encouraged me a great deal," continued Latimore. "He is orienting me to the studio and explaining all the 'do's' and 'don'ts' of broadcasting."

At the age of 10, Latimore had his first cataract operation. It didn't help, and gradually his condition got worse. At the age of 15 he was completely blind.

"At first," he explained, "it wasn't easy, of course, but thanks to the love and understanding from my family, I was able to cope with it. I didn't let anyone baby me. I wanted to do things on my own."

Latimore became interested in broadcasting at the age of 16. Gradually, through the help of a lot of kind people, he explains, he got different jobs as a disc jockey in "disco clubs." He also worked at private parties and special occasions such as weddings.

Latimore went on to say that he would advertise through flyers. "Word of mouth was also a good type of advertising for me," said Latimore.

Playing the piano, tenor saxophone, and conga drums are three more of Latimore's talents. "I also love to sing," he said. "I think I've been singing since the day the doctor slapped me on the behind."

Exploring religion is another of Latimore's interest. "Without it," he said, "I don't think I could have come this far in my life."

Latimore takes a bus from Sylmar, where he lives three times a week to attend his broadcasting class, which is taught by Raymond Wilson, professor of broadcasting.

"Broadcasting is a very competitive field," said Wilson, "especially for a handicapped person." Wilson does know of a blind disc jockey in the Los Angeles area and also a blind female disc jockey in San Francisco, but could not give any information on them.

Wilson goes on to say that a blind person's audio ability is more acute, which is very helpful in radio broadcasting.

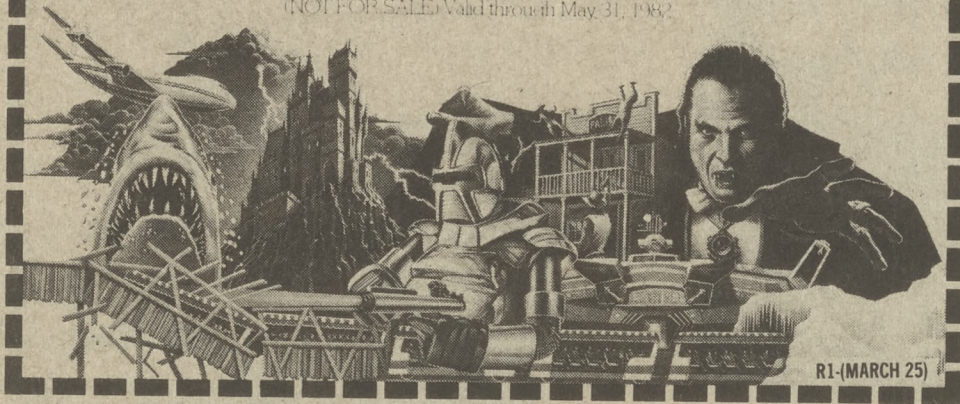

"When a radio station does hire the handicapped or minorities, it definitely makes a lot of points with the FCC (Federal Communications Commission)," Wilson concluded.
